

5 Tips to Switch to a New EHR During Your Current Contract

If you're looking to boost your productivity and revenue by switching to a new EHR system, don't let your current contract hold you back from starting the transition.

1

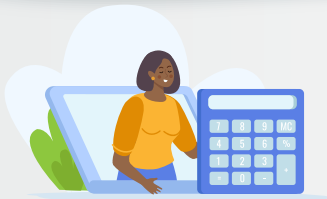

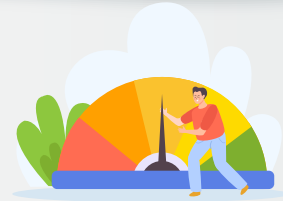

Review Your Contract

Make sure to review the terms and conditions along with your purchase agreement, as you may discover a means to ease into the transition to your new EHR.

2

Take Steps to Transition

It may be possible to reduce the number of licenses in your current EHR to free up funds to start using a better EHR while abiding by your contract.

3

Do the Math

Compare how much time and money your current EHR and workarounds are costing you and how much ROI you could get from your new EHR.

4

Check Outage Costs

Your contract may have a clause regarding a percentage of productivity lost because of outages and maintenance.
